Section 1: Agency Overview and Resources

1.1 Strategic Direction Statement

The Australian Government, through the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW), collects health and welfare related information and statistics, develops specialised statistical standards and classifications relevant to health, health services and welfare services in consultation with the Australian Bureau of Statistics, and analyses and reports on the nation's health and welfare.

In collaboration with stakeholders and partners, AIHW develops, maintains and promotes statistical information standards for the health, community services and housing assistance sectors, and publishes comprehensive biennial reports on Australia's health and welfare. AIHW publishes extensive policy-related health and welfare information to assist informed decision-making by consumers, providers, researchers and all levels of government.

The role and functions of AIHW are set out in the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare Act 1987. AIHW is prescribed as a Commonwealth authority under the Commonwealth Authorities and Companies Act 1997.

Section 2: Outcomes and Planned Performance

2.1 Outcomes and Performance Information

Outcome 1 – A robust evidence-base for the health, housing and community sectors, including through developing and disseminating comparable health and welfare information and statistics

Outcome Strategy

The Australian Government places a high priority on sound, evidence-based policies and programs. This is to ensure that policies and programs are based on accurate, up-to-date information that may lead to improved health and wellbeing for the community. This evidence is also used to address specific issues for particular population groups including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, people with disability, older people, children and youth, the homeless and those at risk of homelessness.

To help achieve this Outcome, the Government funds AIHW to undertake a range of activities to lead and collaborate with stakeholders and partners, including state and territory governments and the Australian Bureau of Statistics.

Through the publication of policy-relevant reports, AIHW supports informed decision-making by consumers, researchers and all levels of government, on improving health and welfare. Statistics are produced on areas such as population health, health services, mental health, and disability services. AIHW also produces statistics on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health and welfare; community services, including those for children and older people; drug and alcohol use and services; and housing and homelessness.

AIHW has a leading role in supplying the national data for reporting on a range of performance indicators and output measures for the national agreements adopted by the Council of Australian Governments (COAG). These are part of the performance framework for federal financial relations.¹

AIHW also has memorandums of understanding to provide data and statistical services to the Department of Families, Housing, Community Services and Indigenous Affairs, the Department of Veterans' Affairs, and the COAG Reform Council Secretariat.

Contributions to the AIHW

Program 1.1: Develop, collect, analyse and report high quality national health and welfare information and statistics for governments and the community

Program Objective

The Australian Government, through this Program, aims to:

- support COAG’s health and welfare policy reform agenda by contributing to the development and collection of high quality and consistent data to enhance the accountability of the Australian Government and state and territory governments to the community;
- maintain and enhance Australia’s health and welfare statistics through opportunities presented by eHealth, information technology and other changes in the data environment;
- improve the accessibility of data to support research, policy and program development while ensuring protection of personal information; and
- improve the communication of key messages from information and statistics to support informed public debate about health and welfare services and their delivery.

Major Activities

Assist the COAG policy reform agenda

AIHW will work with the Australian Government, state and territory governments and other stakeholders to ensure that high quality and consistent data and information are available to underpin the COAG reform agenda in areas of health, housing, homelessness, disability and child protection, including data for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. This reform agenda will increase the transparency of government reporting, resulting in enhanced public performance reporting for the delivery of human services.

The Australian Government is committed to collaborating with state and territory governments on policy development and the facilitation of economic and social reforms. In 2010-11, AIHW will supply data on performance indicators and output measures across areas specified in the Intergovernmental Agreement on Federal Financial Relations and related COAG national agreements and national partnership agreements. AIHW expertise will be used to ensure objective measurement of Australian Government and state and territory governments’ performance and to provide a reliable evidence-base for policy development. This will involve developing new data items for collection across states and territories, redeveloping data standards for some collections, refining collection processes to deliver more timely data, ensuring that nationally consistent definitions are applied, and publishing metadata² that assist the interpretation of the COAG performance indicators.

To meet the challenges of securing improved data collection practices, AIHW works collaboratively with experts in specific areas, including jurisdictional representatives of health, community services and housing departments, through extensive consultations and workshops. These arrangements are auspiced by a variety of bodies, such as the Australian

² Metadata is the underlying definition or structured description of the content, quality, condition or other characteristics of data. More conversationally, it is data about data.

Health Ministers' Conference, the Housing Ministers' Conference and the Community and Disability Services Ministers' Conference. AIHW will also continue to speed up the data supply, particularly data for COAG performance indicators, as timeliness of data provision is its ongoing priority.

Maintain and enhance the quality of Australia's health and welfare statistics

The Australian Government supports the collection of meaningful national statistics on health and wellbeing, and on the health and welfare services provided. Public debate and sound policy making are enhanced by the continued provision of high quality information and analysis across the health and welfare sectors, via reports published in hard copy and online, as well as making data accessible to the public. AIHW will continue to support the production of national data standards, datasets and metadata, and make these standards and metadata freely available through the internet via METeOR. METeOR is the national repository for metadata standards for the health, community services and housing assistance sectors.

AIHW will work to improve statistical reporting, where possible, in response to the changing information environment. Specific changes relate to eHealth (the electronic exchange of clinical and administrative information), revisions of international health classifications and their interaction with terminologies, emerging data sources, and changed regulatory approaches in relation to privacy.

In order to meet the challenges arising from these changes, AIHW will work collaboratively with jurisdictions, national information committees, the National E-Health Transition Authority and other stakeholders, to improve the statistical and analytical uses of data. AIHW will ensure that data standards for health and welfare statistics are maintained and are inclusive of developments in the broader national and international standards and information management environment. AIHW will also implement the outcomes of a data validation project. The enhancements AIHW aims to achieve include speeding up the data validation process, supporting a richer array of data edits, reducing multiple handling of data and providing a better data audit trail.

Enhance data access, while protecting privacy

The Australian Government is committed to improving the use of data to inform policy directions, research and evaluation. In line with its legislative obligations, AIHW will work towards improving the availability and use of its data, including through use of data linkage, with a constant focus on protecting the privacy of individuals.

AIHW will undertake a national leadership role to facilitate accurate, valuable and timely data collection and analysis, and improve access to its data and publications. AIHW will ensure that its custodial and ethics approval processes continue to conform with national human research ethics arrangements, national privacy legislation (including any changes to these arrangements and legislation), policy directions for national health and welfare information, and any new custodial arrangements that might arise from national information agreements. AIHW will support ethical human research by providing controlled access to datasets for specific research.

There is an increasing demand on statistical agencies to make data accessible for the design and evaluation of policy and service programs, and for research. To meet the challenge of enhancing data access while protecting privacy, in 2010-11 AIHW will continue to develop and evaluate methods for maintaining confidentiality of datasets in a manner that, to the greatest practicable degree, preserves their analytical value. AIHW will also undertake reviews of ethics procedures and data custodian arrangements to ensure they represent best practice data release practices and privacy arrangements.

Improve the communication of key messages

The Australian Government’s objectives for evidence-based policy and community engagement are dependent on the availability of easy to understand information. AIHW will continue to assess the effectiveness of its reports using online surveys and analysis of web usage statistics, and produce plain English analyses of key health and welfare issues, easy-to-use statistical products and targeted education materials. These will help improve community understanding and use of health and welfare statistics. AIHW is also expanding its use of web-based technologies to report at a ‘grass-roots’ level, for example, to provide data reports to individual ‘Healthy for Life’ service providers. This aims to improve service delivery by giving providers specific data reference points for their activities.

In 2010-11, the AIHW website³ will be upgraded to enhance the usability and user-friendliness of the site for the public, including for those with a vision impairment. A user survey will be undertaken to assess website functionality.

Section 3.2.1 is not applicable to AIHW.

3.2.2 Analysis of budgeted financial statements

An analysis of AIHW's budgeted financial statements for 2010-11 is provided below.

Departmental Resources

Comprehensive Income Statement

Total revenue in 2010-11 is expected to be slightly higher than in 2009-10 due to funding agreed in the 2009 Budget. Own source income will be about $2 million a year higher than estimated in Additional Estimates as the AIHW continues to win work from Government Departments. In the outyears, revenue from Government will decrease as work on data development for COAG reporting is completed. Total expenses in 2010-11 will be about 9 per cent higher than in 2009-10 as staff numbers increased significantly during 2009-10 in order to deliver the extra work funded in the 2009 Budget. In the outyears, expenses will fall in line with revenue.

Balance Sheet

The AIHW's cash balance and equity will remain at satisfactory levels.
