Gene Technology Regulation in Australia

The Gene Technology Act (2000) and corresponding State and Territory legislation form an integral part of a range of regulatory measures which control the development and use of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) in Australia.

The Gene Technology Regulator is required to consult with, and takes into account advice from, a range of regulatory authorities on risks to human health and safety and the environment in assessing applications for dealings involving the intentional release of GMOs into the Australian environment.

Note continuing operation of other State laws relating to GMOs

This licence does not authorise dealings with GMOs that are otherwise prohibited by State laws that declare GM, GM-free zones or both for marketing purposes. These laws are administered and enforced by the States and Territories.

Note in relation to herbicide resistance management

The GMO referred to in this licence has been modified to be tolerant to a herbicide. The APVMA has responsibility for setting registration conditions for the use of herbicides in Australia, including implementation of herbicide resistance management programs. Conditions of this licence do not relate to use of herbicide, and do not displace any conditions set by the APVMA.
